Bosnia and Herzegovina experienced a terrible war in the early 1990s when Yugoslavia was breaking up. People in the country see gaining EU membership as a gateway to its stability and prosperity. The country's leadership is working towards achieving the goal while intensifying regional cooperation in the Balkans once ravaged by the war.

Sophia Institute of International Relations is inviting his excellency Mr. Igor CRNADAK, Foreign Minister of Bosnia and Herzegovina, to give a special lecture regarding the country's position in Europe and the Balkans. This will be a unique opportunity to gain insights into how a post-conflict Balkan nation attempts to establish its position in an increasingly connected world.

Moderator : Dr. Tina Burrett

Faculty of Liberal Arts, Sophia University
